Merchants Will Urge Carmel Residents to Shop at Home

Plans to urge Carmel residents to buy and trade at home were being outlined this week as the result of a discussion taken last Thursday night at the regular meeting of the Carmel Business association.

At the meeting, it was pointed out that local residents were finding a tendency to do a larger part of their shopping in other sections of the Monterey peninsula. They were not giving Carmel merchants a chance.

Robert Parrott, president of the association, explained that it was not the intention of the local merchants to blame the residents for shopping out of town.

"Whether or not the merchants are at fault in causing residents to shop over the hill, we want to do everything within reason to stop it. We believe that our local merchants are giving out values as fair as can be had in other parts of the peninsula. Not only will the merchants benefit by increased patronage but the entire city will gain."

It was stressed at the meeting by other speakers that all the merchants asked of the residents, was a chance to show their wares before a purchase is made. There was no need, they declared, for residents spending their money and trading over the hill.

As a result of the discussion which lasted for almost an hour, a campaign to increase shopping in Carmel is to be undertaken. The merchant's committee will study the entire situation and make a full report on the conditions found.

Among the speakers who talked on this subject were Tom Phillips, John Bathan, E. H. Ewig, Ernest Bixler, Eugene Watson, Mrs. John Turner, Ben Wetzel and several others.

A resolution expressing the regrets of the association in the death of one of their members, William Koch, was passed. A letter of condolence was sent to his widow.

During the meeting, Marie De-Amaral, a Carmel youngster invited the business men and merchants to attend the Washington pageant to be given tonight at the local school auditorium.

Street Plan Causes War of Words in Council Chambers

Carmel's street plan project was abusively walked upon by part of one of the largest audiences that ever attended a city council meeting when the matter came up for discussion Wednesday night.

But the plan withstood the severe tramping with concrete stability, and today it was a step nearer realization than ever before. Those attending this week's meeting were divided on the subject, some strongly favoring it and others protesting.

In the meantime, it is the hope of the council to sense out the opinion of the majority of residents and see how they feel about the project. Mayor Herbert Heron definitely announced thta if a majority of the residents objected to the plan, the council would not attempt to put it over.

There was considerable discussion by the large crowd that attended the meeting, where the hall leading to the council chambers was packed. Yet a large part of the talks made by individual property owners was in complaints of holes and bad drainage system around their homes.

Mayor Heron took the opportunity to point out to residents that the council members were receiving dozens of complaints from every section. He said:

"The winter that we are having is not unusual for Carmel. It is an average, typical Carmel winter. In the early days, we allowed the drainage to go where it would. We cannot do that now. There are only three plans feasible, we either adopt this project, or pave the entire residental district from curb to curb, cutting down all trees and making the city like other towns, or we simply have to give up and throw up our hands."

Preceding Mayor Heron, Councilwoman Clara Kellogg read to the council the report of George Seideneck and Lee Gottfried, who drew up the preliminary plan. The report is of a technical nature and can only be adequately comprehended by reading it and studying the maps. Residents and property owners are to be given an opportunity to go over it carefully.

First to speak in opposition to the project was Talbert Josselyn, who asked of the council how much it would cost each individual lot.

Mayor Heron answered that as yet that figure could not be given as the city engineer was drawing up a probable estimate of the cost. He said, however, that it would cost probably around $50 a lot. This brought Josselyn to his feet.

"At a time when the entire country is suffering from a terrific economic crisis and the delinquent tax list looks like a magazine, the council should not push this project before the tax payers," Josselyn said: "It would cost entirely too much. The majority of property owners do not want it."

Frederick Bechdolt, chairman of the committee of seven, replied to Josselyn's talk.

"Most of the property in Carmel was purchased at small amounts," he declared. "Now many of us own large tracts of land. These lots once sold for as low as $150 and now sell as high as $1500. The value of property has risen at a great pace. To reach these lots, we have been traveling over make-shift streets that are being maintained at a terrific expense to the tax payers. It is not unfair, to ask us, as property owners to pay for improving the streets and putting them in such a manner that they are passable. Carmel cannot go on as it has. These streets must be improved. The Carmel street plan is the best thing ever offered to save individuality and the beauty of the village."

Mayor Heron then explained to the audience that if $40 was the assessment levied on a piece of property it would not have to be paid at once. He illustrated how it would be paid over a period of ten years and together with interest would not mean more than $5 a year.

George Wood, protested against assessing property to put the project through, but urged that the money should be obtained through a general bond issue. He said that in his opinion, the entire city would benefit and consequently all should be made to pay.

William Silva, said that it appeared to him that the entire plan was a big paving project. "It looks to me like an attempt is being made to pave the entire city," he said, "only that the council has been careful to use the word surface instead of the word paving."

Frederick Burt, a new comer to Carmel, declared that in his opinion it was not a question of "my little lot." He said that the beauty of the town must be considered. If the beauty once disappears, Carmel is doomed.

Mayor Heron replied that one of the reasons the council favored the proposed street plan now under consideration was because it kept the atmosphere of Carmel which had made it world famous and at the same time improved the streets so that they were passable.

Many questions regarding what is to be done in certain sections of the city were asked by the individual property owners and were answered by Lee Gottfried. All day yesterday Gottfried remained at the council chambers to go over the plan with interested property owners.

The rest of the evening until midnight was left to general discussion. No definite action was taken by the council. Within a few weeks, an estimate of the project's cost will be given by the city engineer and then the matter will be again discussed with the public at large.

Mr. Calley wishes to notify the members of the adult shop class that meets at Sunset School on Monday evenings, that the class will meet this week as usual despite the fact that it is a holiday.

Washington to be Feted Here In Four-Day Birthday Program

Carmel will join with hundreds of other cities in the United States in observing this week-end the bicentennial anniversary of the birth of George Washington,

Sunset school, local churches and various organizations have all joined in making plans for the affairs. Because of the fact that this is one of the few times that Carmel has made any preparations to celebrate a patriotic holiday, extra effort is being taken to make the affair a success.

The celebration which goes back two hundred years when Washington was born will center tonight on the pageant to be given at the Sunset school auditorium. The play has been written by the youngsters and will feature a large cast of players. R. J. Gale is directing the pageant while Miss Madeline Curry is lending a hand as far as the music is concerned.

Sunday morning, All Saint's Episcopal church will honor the memory of Washington with special patriotic services. Members of the Carmel Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts will be in attendance and will participate in the program.

Patriotic songs, appropriate with the theme of the service will also be featured. Rev. Austin Chinn, pastor of the church will speak on Washington, revealing many of the first president's characteristics and the importance of celebrating his birthday.

The Christian Science church will follow suit and will also have a special service on Sunday morning, starting at 11 o'clock. Talks on Washington will be given.

On Sunday night, the Episcopal and Community church will join in a community service starting at 7:30 o'clock. The services will be given at the Community church. Frederick Bechdolt and R. J. Gale will each give a 2-minute talk on Washington. Rev. Harold Grimshaw and Rev. Austin Chinn will both preside.

Monday afternoon, the annual Carmel kite festival will be held with dozens of local youngsters participating. The youngsters have been making plans for the flying contest for many weeks and varied types will be flown on this occasion. The best Washington kite will be selected as the winner of the contest.

The local celebration will be given another phase. Monday morning when the Masonic club dedicates a redwood tree in front of Sunset school. Short talks will feature the affair which is being handled by a committee headed by Charles Watson.

Local merchants are considering seriously the probability of closing between 1 and 3 o'clock on Monday. The Carmel Business association at their meeting last week passed a resolution urging them to observe the holiday during these hours.

The general committe in charge of the local celebration is composed of O. W. Bardarson, J. E. Abernathy, William Overstreet, Don Hale and Mrs. E. L. Taylor.

Thrilling Action!

"The Drunkard" to Stagger Over Local Stage Tonight

A capacity house is expected to attend each of the three performances starting tonight of "The Drunkard," the thrilling melodrama of the saloon days to be given under the direction of Galt Bell at the Denny-Watrous gallery.

Done in real old-fashioned style, with all the trimmings, the hisses and the applause that marked plays given in the eighties, "The Drunkard" will leave a warm spot in every prohibitionist or wringing wet's heart.

Carmel audiences who have enjoyed "Ten Nights in the Barroom" will find "The Drunkard" a more dramatic piece of work. It is being revived with the aid of Alice Brainard of the Berkeley playhouse who presented it several years ago at the community playhouse there.

The play created so much comment and was so well attended that it was brought back for three return engagements. So well did it go over in Berkeley, that many eastbay residents are expected in Carmel this week-end to see the production again.

"The Drunkard" opens tonight and will be repeated Saturday and Sunday night. The Denny-Watrous gallery has been decorated in keeping with the atmosphere of the play. Everything will be as it was first presented back in 1844. Those in the cast include Ruth Marion, Alice Brainard, Edwin McDonald, Samuel Ethridge, Tommy Schuman, Roger Ruston, Preston Schobe, Charles O'Neal, Fritz Wurtman, Charles McCrath, Dick Sears, Richard Catlett, Sally Haller, Kevin Wallace, Jack Steward, Howard Brooks and others.

Musical Barks Cost Auto Driver $20 Fine

It might not be a valuable dog—but its musical barking kept Frederick Preston Search, local composer, in good humor.

And as a result, L. M. Rhodes, Monterey accountant was yesterday fined $20 on a reckless driving charge after he struck and seriously injured Search's pet dog.

Search filed the charges against Rhodes and the latter pleaded guilty to the charge before Richard Hoagland.

$15,000 Suit To Be Filed Against City

Damages of $15,000 will be sought from the city in a suit to be filed in the superior court at Salinas by Mrs. Ivy Basham, it was revealed today.

Mrs. Basham will ask damages as the result of a fall suffered several months ago on the stairs leading to the city hall. According to Mrs. Basham's attorney, the fall was caused by a strip of brass which was protruding from the stairs. Mrs. Basham sustained a fractured arm and was in the hospital for a number of weeks.

City Attorney Argyll Campbell is investigating the legal status of the case.

Parties at Del Monte

Saturday night as well as Washington's Birthday night will see many gay parties gathered in the artistic new Bali Room of the Del Monte Hotel. Hal Girvin, director of the popular orchestra from San Francisco, has fitted his music to the mood of the decorations in the room by Moira Wallace, getting results that are proving most successful.

Miss Laura van Wyck Chinn, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Chinn was one of the soloists at the Benefit Ball, given last Thursday evening in San Francisco by the Wakefield Foundation in connection with the George Washington Bicentennial Celebration.

Omigosh! Residents May Turn Indians to Collect Allowance

The magazines may not be buying much material; the art lovers pocket books are closed as far as the artists are concerned for the time being.

But such things don't bother Carmel's artistic element. There is always a way out. And Carmel residents are finding that it's a good avenue for financial independence.

The dream of every poet, writer or painter is a monthly income that provides for the daily bread and the salt of life. No more potboilers to paint—no more stories to write in which three persons die in every chapter.

If the plan goes through, they will no longer have to bother with the material things, such as beans and hamburger. They will be able to devote all their time to artistic endeavor. Great canvases will be painted—the great American novel may come out of Carmel.

Here's how. A law now up before congress which provides that any Indian or anyone with three quarters of Indian blood flowing in his veins, will receive on application, a monthly income of between $75 and $100. All the applicant has to show is proof of his Indian ancestary.

As a result, all the books on genealogy in the Carmel, Monterey and Pacific Grove libraries are out. Members of Carmel's artistic element are busily at work figuring out their pedigree. If their lineage is correct and they have definite proof that they have Indian blood, there will be no more worry about depression and unemployment. They will be taken care of, for the rest of their lives.

Astonishing to say the least, is the number of Indians that have sprung up in "our best society."

Many, who have always been considered of German and even Russian ancestary, have suddenly become American Indians. If it continues, there will be more Indians in this section, than there were when Father Serra came over the hill.

Soon, the cry of "another Indian bit the dust" may reverberate through Carmel's hills!

General Schuyler Dies Following Operation

General W. S. Schuyler, one of the most colorful leaders in the United States army was dead today at the age of 82.

He succumbed Wednesday night at the Letterman hospital in San Francisco following an operation. His wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Schuyler, was at his bedside when the end came.

General Schuyler came to Carmel 14 years ago, shortly after he retired from active service in the army. During his military career, he fought during the early Indian wars and also participated in other offensives.

Military funeral rites are to be given today at the San Francisco presidio. He will be buried in that city.

Rocky Creek Bridge to Open Another Stretch of Highway

Another bridge along the way of the Carmel-San Simeon highway is to start building this spring, according to the current number of the state highway commission's publication, "California Highways." Rocky creek, about seventeen miles below Carmel, will have a handsome structure to cost well over $100,000 spanning it, and with its completion, another section of the highway will be open to travel. The road has been built by the Little Sur highway camp.

Grading and surfacing of the highway from San Remo divide to the Carmel river is also on the 1932 program of work of the state highway department. Contract for this job will be awarded some time after April 1.

Another Monterey county job, grade separation on the main line coast highway near Soledad, is also on the program for this year. This job will add another underpass to the highway system in this county. It will eliminate a dangerous grade crossing.

Colonel Walter E. Garrison, director of public works, writing on the 520 miles of new road and the 30 brigdes in the construction program for this year makes the following mention of the Rocky creek job:

"A structure of major importance will be built across Rocky creek on the Carmel-San Simeon highway in Monterey county. This bridge will be located at the southerly end of a grading contract which is now under way between Rocky creek and San Remo divide. It is also about one-half mile north of Bixby creek where a large concrete arch is now being constructed. The proposed Rocky creek bridge will be a reinforced concrete arch.

"This structure will be another unit in the construction of this scenic highway which clings to the rugged coast of Monterey and San Luis Obispo counties."

The Devil Walks

By Herbert Cerwin

Carmel's vibrations are not as they should be.

The village has a skeleton in the closet which she has kept hidden for years. Only the old timers know the secret. And their lips are sealed.

Competent astrologers, not fly-by-night fakirs, will refuse to spend the night in the village. Psychic individuals, who move along on vibrations and who decide weighty problems by trances, keep clear out of Carmel.

This is one of the reasons, why so few fortune tellers, come to town. Spiritual seances practically never take place here. There are sufficient spirits running around loose, but no competent clairvoyant will take the chance of going into a trance while in or around Carmel.

The cause for it has always remained a mystery. Only a short time ago, a famous astrologer with a national reputation, paid a visit to some friends in the village. They sat around the fire talking until the clock struck midnight.

The astrologer was tired and there were several guest rooms at the home she was visiting. But she turned down all invitations to spend the night. The hostess had to take her to Pacific Grove, where they awoke a sleepy night clerk.

"Spend the night in Carmel? Br-r-r-r-it gives me the shivers to even think about it," she told her hostess.

Three-fourths of the audience who last week witnessed the farewell appearance of William Gillette in "Sherlock Holmes" at the Golden State theatre in Monterey, came from Carmel.

One or two in the audience having seen Gillette when he made he debut in New York in 1877. Gillette played many roles during his career, but none as noteworthy as the part of Sherlock Holmes. This play, which for years was one of the theatrical successes of the country, was written in 1899 in San Francisco while Gillette was playing in "Secret Service."

Gillette in his appearance here, had all of the fire and characteristics that once made him famous. Despite his 77 years, his acting has not suffered. Age has mellowed and in fact improved the part of Sherlock Holmes.

It is indeed of interest to compare the first of the mystery plays with modern ones. It moves with a slow tempo, characteristic of the productions of the early days. Yet there is enough speed and novely to keep a modern audience spell bound.

A play without marriage or a love affair in the eighties would have completely flopped. And so poor Sherlock, his arm full of morphine needle marks, makes love to a girl in her twenties.

Each year, American book publishers issue some 10,000 books, ranging from fiction to fairy tales. Out of this number, it has been recently estimated, only one in about every 50 books printed, survives for more than two years.

No publisher, wisely, has yet attempted to estimate how many books live more than five years.

A Hollywood moving picture director who often visited Carmel and who spent an entire summer here several years ago, is now selling neon signs in Los Angeles. He has been unable to break into the movies since the talkies came in.

There's a climax to this story. The neon salesman this director succeeds, is now drawing $3000 a week as a director. Just a change of place. Before the year is over the $3000 a week director might be back selling signs.

Another Carmel resident has broken into the movies. Jack "Tex" Dalton, has sold a story, "Stoney Joe" to one of the moving picture studios in Hollywood. And there's a chance "Tex" may play a leading part in the production.

This news should give Carmel writers a sad headache. This story is the first "Tex" has written. Lee Sage, otherwise "Snap" Nelson, another Carmel cowboy, has a picture based on a story he wrote and called "Without Honor" coming out soon. Carmel's literary atmosphere must agree with cowboys.

Carmel Basket Ball Team Loses in Close Contest

The Carmel Dairy Basket Ball Team which is a leading contester for the Industrial League Basket Ball Champion, dropped a close, hard fought battle to Neuman's Grocery Team of Monterey, Monday night. The game was a thriller throughout and was apparently won for the Dairy, until the last two minutes, when Neuman's took a sudden desperate spurt and emerged victorious, 20 to 18. The result of Monday's game places the Carmel Dairy in second place with a good chance left to work their way to the top.

The Carmel Dairy team is made up entirely of local boys, sponsored by Earl Graft of the Dairy and coached by O. W. Bardarson who holds down the center position, with "Mitty" Tobiasen, M. Stoney, Stan Heron and H. Hilbert take care of the forward positions, while the guards are Fred Warren, Roy Wells and "Cheeks" Behail.

Shed A Tear—Daring Peter Ends Life After Love Affair

Peter will love no more.

This swashbuckling Don Juan of Carmel, who with every twist of his long, black moustache made young maiden's hearts flutter, has found his Nemesis.

The story of his bold advances, his romantic career and his unpardonable sins, can now be told. Peter is dead. He committed suicide this week. And all that was mortal of him is buried in an elaborate plot in Carmel Woods.

Peter was an artist. With the brush he was not much good. But his love making was the talk of the town. His daring escapades began the moment Peter arrived in town. It was something about his personality, his mannerism his very voice, that attracted the female of the species.

He had but to wink his devilish eye and every female, single or married, left their own room and board to come to his embrace. Young debutantes, climbed out of high windows, at the risk of their necks, to spend a few moments of stolen love with Peter.

Peter's debonair attitude won them all in time. He loved as recklessly as he lived. One day he would be deeply in love with a blonde. Then the next day it might be a brunette. Peter was fickle as any moving picture star.

Then came a day when Peter was strolling down San Carlos street, near Carmel Woods. He came to an abrupt stop. Pressed close against the window pane, looking out, was the face of a glorious looking female. Her lovely blonde hair was combed back. Her blue eyes sent admiring glances out.

Peter whistled a tune in his best masculine manner and smiled.

But lo and behold, something occurred that had never happened in Peter's life. The pretty maiden, whose name was Flossie, stuck her tongue out at this modern Casanova and pulled the shade down.

But tongue sticking would not deter daring Peter. Boldly me climbed through a window and met face to face, this divine creature.

Strong as Flossie's will-power was, she returned Peter's smile. Peter twisted his moustache and Flossie's heart began to flutter. It was a case of love at first sight.

Both knew it. Both accepted the course. But here's where the rub comes in. Flossie had been brought up with a silver spoon in her mouth, until the stock market crash came. No longer could she drink of the cream of life. She had to be contented with canned milk.

Flossie had already accepted the proposal of marriage from a wealthy Carmel valley resident. Then Peter came. Peter offered a deep, tempestuous love. He was romance. But Flossie loved the material things of life too much. Peter was poor. Her prospective husband had great wealth.

She considered her two suitors. Peter was given the gate.

He turned to other loves. But Flossie's memory was too much. Peter, who had broken dozens of hearts, was now suffering from the same affliction.

Flossie was married last Sunday. Monday morning Peter was found dead in a Carmel Wood's garage. He had hung himself, his nine lives and all.

Miss Ann Duffy and her sister Mrs. Edward Olney have returned to their Carmel home from a three months stay in the bay cities.

An Interview With Mr. Luis Mora Without Mr. Mora Being Present

By Daisy Bostick

A long time ago— forty-three years to be exact—a small boy was graduated from the Grammar School of Alston, Massachusetts. This small boy was F. Luis Mora, and he had already begun to dream of being a great artist like his father, Domingo Mora, before him. Brought up in an art atmosphere and with a real understanding of artistic values and ideals, Luis Mora was even then giving promise of greater things. And so he left as his parting gift to the school, a water color of "The Surrender of Yorktown," which painting is probably still there as a treasured possession.

Toady Luis Mora is one of twenty great artists of the United States, engaged to illustrate episodes in the life of George Washington, to be incorporated in the portfolio of etchings now being assembled and compiled by the George Washington Memorial Association, and used as a feature of the Bi-Centennial celebration. And again he chose " The Surrender of Yorktown." And of Mora's finished plate, the publisher of the portfolio, Mr. Arthur Brook, writes:

"I am pleased beyond measure with your Yorktown plate. It is a great work of art, and is beautiful and satisfying in every respect."

And again in the letter he speaks of

". . . . the magnificient result you have obtained . . . and which has given us and the historians much happiness and pleasure."

The small boy graduate of the Alston grammer school has gone far.

WHO'S WHO tells us that F. Luis Mora was born in Monte Video, Uruguay, South America, that he received his art education in Europe and America; that he has done illustrative work for our leading magazines and periodicals; that he has been represented in the most important art exhibitions in America; and that his work is now in all of the big permanent exhibits of the United States. His home is at Gaylordsville, Connecticut, and he is now living in Carmel and working in his brother, Jo Mora's studio at Pebble Beach.

It was a cold, dismal day when a group of us went over to the studio to see the work done by Mr. Mora this winter. We didn't find Luis, but we did find Jo, who stoked up the old-fashioned wood stove and gave us a welcome to his studio. Jo is a sculptor who paints on the side and Luis is a painter who sculps on the side. Jo is a sincere artist, a great enthusiast, and a philosopher with fascinating thought-processes, and it was extremely difficult to confine myself to an interview with Luis, who wasn't there, rather than with Jo, who was.

Between the brothers there is a great devotion, and each has respect and admiration for the other's ability and talents. There is a similarity in feature and build, but Jo is typically western, and Luis is a true New Yorker—gallant, charming and with all the little delicate manners and graces of the more sophisticated eastern communities. I hear, however, that he makes fine speeches before Rotary Clubs, Chambers of Commerce and such, and that he's considered an authority on "How to Clean Up a City." In fact, there was a Texas town where Luis Mora spoke before a big business club, and after he finished with tin can and rubbish disposal and back alley dumps, and kindred topics relating to sanitary conditions, he paused a moment and then delivered his conclusion: "AND THIS IS ART." The reverberations of that applause are still sounding. And because Luis Mora spoke their language and was a regular fellow, he was greater than a great artist to those Texans.

But to get back to the Pebble Beach studio. You enter between Jo's two huge original plaster models of the Marlin group—the bronzes are in their permanent home in Ponca City, Oklahoma. Everything in the studio is on a huge scale. Essentially a man's work room. Big lines, large pedestals with ghostly unfinished figures. Clay and cobwebs! Lovely bits of figures poked around here and there. Canvas-draped painting! But amidst these neutral greys, the small black equestrian figures and the occasional dull bronze of a statue soon to be delivered to its buyer, were the two big, smashing dominating life-sized portraits of Patty and Jo Mora, the son and daughter of Jo the sculptor, and painted by Luis as his Christmas gift to his brother—Patty in a lovely Spanish dress and high comb, and Jo in full riding togs standing by his horse. After we had admired the feeling and workmanship of these paintings, Jo brought out the landscapes which Luis has done this winter.

The most fascinating of these, at least to me, was called THE HORSEMAN OF CARMEL. It was a Pegasus formed by the spray of the breaking surf, on the beach just at the water's edge. In fact, the figure might be spindrift, moonlight, and the peculiar little curl of the wave, rolled into one. And a little fantastic as well. And it told me better than Luis Mora could have told me that he is a poet as well as a painter. This poetic quality is evidenced in all of his work.

Another painting was THE SPIRIT OF FREEDOM, a lovely allegorical thing, of a Navajo on his horse, running madly through the high grass of an open wind-swept prairie. Tremendous in conception. Every line converging upward and outward. The horse and rider a part of the prairie and the sky. Activity and vitality everywhere—even to the waving grass and the scudding clouds. Luis says he was inspired to do this after reading Oliver LaFarge's LAUGHING BOY.

There was another interesting Navajo called MOTHER FROM THE TURQUOISE LAND, a lovely decorative panel, ROSES IN SPAIN, and two delightful Carmel paintings entitled PEARL AND SAPPHIRE COVES and STORM AT THE HIGHLANDS.

And then Jo brought out Luis porcelains. Four lovely graceful luminous bits of sculpture. And a story of long experimentation to get the fine glaze and the beautiful finish. And when success was there and to an American factory would go the honor of attaining the finest perfection in this branch of craftsmanship, old man Depression took a hand and closed up the factory. However, Luis is not discouraged, and will eventually renew his quest for the firm that will help him to put poetry into porcelain as well as into painting.

The P. T. A. of Carmel announces that Mrs. Langford Smith will help organize a Pre-school group if enough mothers prove to be interested in such an opportunity.

Mrs. Smith will be at the kindergarten room of Sunset School on Saturday morning February 20 from 9:30 to 11:30 and will gladly welcome mothers and their little children who care to join her.

Rose Florence in Song Recital

By Hal Garrott

We are indebted to Misses Denny-Watrous for bringing to Carmel music lovers a song recital of unusual merit. Rose Florence, accompanied at the piano by Elizabeth Alexander, presented a program Saturday evening including Handel, Schumann, Moussorgsky, Wolff, Griffes, La Forge, Carpenter, Ravel, Roussel, Nerini, Cimara.

So unusual was the program, the sort that is seldom heard even in the largest cities, a number of San Franciscans came down to Carmel to hear it. Prominent among them were Noel Sullivan, basso, who gave a recital here some months ago, and Mrs. Lawrence Strauss, wife of the singer who has appeared in concert in Carmel a number of times. The Denny-Watrous Gallery was well filled. Even Lincoln Steffens deserted the avalanche of mail that has poured in upon him ever since the publication of his autobiography, and numerous writers, artists, musicians and other celebrities complimented Rose Florence by attending.

Rose Florence is at her best in pianissimo singing, in simple ditties where words and music flow together in perfect union, the sort of thing that can be sung in the nursery or in the home. In this field she is charming, so captivating, indeed, that if I were a woman and good looking and could wear a red dress and sing the way Rose Florence does— I'd never, never sing anything else— certainly not ambitious "athletic" classical pieces. When she raises her voice to scale such musical heights it loses its sweetness, takes on a quavery wabble, becomes a bit uncertain. Rose Florence was born to touch the heart in soft, sweet song—a gift great enough for any ambitious soul, and one well worth sticking to.

As usual, Elizabeth Alexander's accompaniments were delightful. If accompaniments could make vocalists Miss Alexander would rival the great masters of the singing art.

Anne Martin Calls for Support of President in Disarmament

Miss Anne Martin writes from Denver, Colorado, enclosing a letter from President Herbert Hoover, at the White House, which reads: "My dear Miss Martin: I have your telegram with respect to the address I made Monday on further disarmament. I wish to thank you for your cordial support. Yours faithfully, Herbert Hoover,"

Miss Martin comments:

The enclosed letter from President Hoover, which I hope you will publish as a part of this communication, shows that our elected representatives in Washington, including the President, are sensitive to the opinions of their constituents on matters of public policy. This letter is not an isolated example, as he has replied to communications from others of our members on disarmament and allied subjects. I make this point as there has been a tendency to ridicule the efforts of women's organizations to enlist the support of our government officials on questions we have at heart. We have surely acted, and are acting, in the spirit of American institutions in so doing. The underlying principle of our government has always been that our elected representatives are the servants of the people.

It is well known in Washington that no president has been more hesitant on important policies in the face of criticism or opposition, and none more ready to act if assured of support than President Hoover.

Now of all times the President should be supported by letters and telegrams, asking him to instruct the United States delegation at the World Disarmament Congress to give effect to his declarations for World disarmament by standing firmly for substantial armament reduction, with the object of eventual complete disarmament of all nations, thus paving the way for conferences instead of war in settling international disputes.

On October 10th a delegation of nearly eight hundred members of the Women's International League, led by Miss Addams, presented this viewpoint to him at the White House with the "peace caravan" petition, containing nearly 500,000 signatures, and he thanked them warmly. On February 6, a large W. I. L. delegation again was cordially received by him, and presented disarmament resolutions from all over the country.

Now surely is the time for every citizen who wishes to help prevent the destruction of the modern world by armaments and war to stand back of this work and the President, and to write or wire him assurances of support in his desire for world disarmament, and of such action as the United States delegation of the World Disarmament conference at Geneva may take to secure this end.

Mexican Crafts on Exhibition At Stanford Art Gallery

A collection of arts and crafts from Mexico is on exhibition in the Stanford Art Gallery and will be on view during this month.

The group was assembled by Mr. and Mrs. Pedro J. Lemos during their trip last summer in Mexico where Mr. Lemos was invited by the secretary of Mexico education to make a survey of the art education of Mexico. The crafts collection includes furniture, weavings, embroideries, pottery, glass, wood carvings, iron work, lacquer work, leather, basketry, and serapes.

In addition to the crafts a collection of paintings by two young Mexican artists are being shown. A group of decorative designs, drawings, wood-blocks, paintings and stone sculpture from the outdoor art schools of Mexico are also exhibited. These Schools sponsored by the government open to students of all ages are responsible for the recent remarkable progress in art education achieved by Mexico.

A group of artistic photographs portraits and scenery of Mexico, by Mexico's three best photographers are included in the two galleries. The gallery is open every day to the public from ten until five o'clock and no admission is charged.

Adult Classes Make Use of Sunset School Facilities

The new gymnasium at the Sunset School is interesting the adult males of Carmel, where a dozen or so gather each Monday evening for volley ball, and a class of larger size and younger men play at basketball on Tuesday and Thursday nights. Under the name of the Carmel Dairy, the basketball team is taking part in games in the neighboring cities.

The night school classes in Women's physical culture, under direction of Miss Jean Wallace of the school, are well attended on Wednesday nights, as are Ernest Calley's classes in wood working and clay modeling. A new kiln for baking pottery has just been installed that is considered one of the finest in the county.

Several pupils of the Sunset School have been making speeches before civic bodies on the peninsula, telling of the significance of Washington's birthday centennial, and the school's pageant drama. Talks wer given before the city council, the P.T.A., the Business association, and the Monterey High School assembly.

Drop Change in Bottles And Feed Kiddies Milk

The Carmel Red Cross has found so many children who are not getting sufficient milk that a milk fund has been formed to supplement the amount set aside by the Red Cross for this use. Milk bottles, labeled for the purpose, will be placed in the Carmel stores and all donations will be used for this one object. Donald Hale, Mrs. James Grey and Miss Etta Paul have charge.

The Red Cross again makes an appeal for men's clothing. Not only clothes for men but garments of all kinds are requested for distribution. These may be left with Miss Alice Gillette, Hillside cottage, Fifth and Monte Verde, Carmel.

EDITORIAL

A CENTENNIAL EDITORIAL

With George Washington's bi-centennary at hand, there is more than the usual display of Americanism in Carmel this month, and soviet Russia temporarily takes a back seat for the star spangled banner. Even then our patriotism must tread carefully to keep off of disarmament corns, and not thrust an elbow into the ribs of the anti-militarist.

Carmel is stronger—or louder, anyway—at criticism of the country's standards and government than praise of its institutions. We are better at tearing down than in building up. We save our bouquets to toss to communistic Russia, and slam brickbats at our capitalistic government. A movement to uphold an American project here usually becomes a pat of approval for the Five-Year-Plan.

Whether Washington's Birthday will give opportunity for some of our people to belittle the achievements of the United States is yet to be discovered. We know of no communist who has been invited to address any of the meetings. While Washington's services as military head of the revolutionary armies will probably not be stressed, it is likely that nobody will compare him with Stalin to his disadvantage. The country that Washington fathered will undoubtedly be given the better of it for the occasion.

But only for the occasion. We will listen through the year to many a radical address and read much fierce criticism of American methods of government in our community pink. Russia will get the major share of commendation from rostrum and type page. Patriotism will be submerged in Internationalism. Carmel will sound radical and communistic, even though it is not.

For, quietly and sincerely, Carmel is intensely patriotic, very proud of its country's institutions and history. Not so many years ago, when our country had need for the services of its people, Carmel was eager to do its full share. Men volunteered, and women worked with sewing machines and knitting needles to supply an army's demands. There was no slacking. Whether in war or at peace, Carmel has met its national calls for service promptly and fully.

Without noise. Patriotism here is not vociferous. Even the PINE CONE with a great pride in our country and a deep love for its flag, its altruism and its noble ideals, has rarely printed an editorial that would show its feelings. In our columns have been run reports of meetings whose speakers have been frank in attacks upon governmental policies. Though we have not editorially approved such utterances, we have ignored them. The few noisy ones, communists or merely disgruntled, have been allowed their say. In the knowledge that Carmel is sound at heart, patriotically American, we can leave another statement of the fact to the next centennial of Washington's birth.

COUNTY GOVERNMENT

In the matter of added representation for this district on the board of supervisors, nothing will be gained by argument before that body. A majority of the board is now, has been and always will be opposed to giving the incorporated parts of the county their proper numerical representation, nor is this majority without a reasonable argument against so doing. For unincorporated Monterey county, Salinas is the seat of government, and the board of supervisors is the power; while the incorporated parts of the county—the cities—have each its own government and governing body. Unincorporated districts have more at stake in the board of supervisors than have the cities.

Whether this argument is a fair one, it will always be the excuse for giving the rural districts stronger representation than the urban. It is a waste of breath to urge, beg or argue. So long as the county operates without a charter, the cities will pay the bulk of its taxes and receive the small end of its services.

But it is possible to place Monterey county under a charter form of government through initiated effort, and if a workable scheme that would be fair to all parts of the county could be planned, it would carry at an election. Several years ago a county manager form of government was proposed by the American Legion posts, and a mass meeting was held at Salinas to consider it. Not enough preliminary work had been done by its sponsors, and it dropped in pieces under mild opposition before it really got started. It was talked to death in one short session.

That experience should have taught the lesson of a united front for a considered and detailed plan of government. If a group of representative men from every district in the county could be brought into agreement as to a form charter, then with their backing it would be possible to carry it through. It is a matter worth a big effort. The Monterey peninsula is most vitally interested, yet is fair-minded in its desire that all sections of the county have a say in the plan, and are properly represented.

THE UNLOCKED DOOR

"Please do not mention the fact that I am going away in your News Reel column," is a frequent request at the PINE CONE office. It is the result of many a proud boast, "I never lock my door," made in the past. Carmel has changed from the crime-less village of yore, to the fear-haunted town of burglarious visits of today.

We have been too careless, and have bragged too loudly. Sneak-thievery has been induced by lack of precautions against it. We were wide open for burglarious entry. And in our pride, we told the world how easy house-breaking was here.

Now, when we leave town for a few days, we are afraid to admit the unoccupancy of the premises; when we go to the movies, we leave all the lights burning with deceitful intent; when we go to the post-office, we close and bolt the windows, lock the doors and hide the key under the mat.

It is significant that most of the burglaries are happening outside the city limits. As we told the world of our freedom from doorlocks we also acclaimed the ability of our peace officer, Gus Englund. Stories of Carmel's crimeless existence carried with them the inference that our mounted policeman was responsible for the ideal condition. Now, within his jurisdiction is comparative safety; it is the suburban areas that suffer.

Hereafter we intend to stress stories that tell the tightness of Carmel's homes, within and without the city limits lines. Burglar-proof locks will be on all doors and windows. The legend of a crimeless Carmell

THE FRAGRANCE OF FLOWERS

The fragrance is the soul of the flower
Speaking to you and to me;
Giving birth to a sense of beauty
Through unconscious sympathy.

The spirit of the pasture dwells
In the parsley flower and leaf;
And in the wheatfields ripening
The sweet sun-smell of the sheaf.

The wild rose fragrance cleanest of all
Exhales the soul of the dew:
Rivaled only by new mown hay,
Or the quiet scent of the rue.

The wallflower dressed so soberly
Is much like a Mennonite maid;
The earthy odor of maidenhair
Presents an image of shade.

The mignonette is singing softly
To itself like a tiny joy;
The lilac gives its heart in fragrance,
Delightful sweets without alloy.

The scent of the grass pink is subtle
As music; and the daintiest smells
Of flowers are apple blossoms, limes,
Violets and canterbury-bells.

Sweet peas are the breath of fairies
Delicately scenting the air;
And the sophisticated hyacinth's
Odor has a naughty flair.

Jasmine fragrance is like something
Belonging to death and the night;
Or quiet winds that haunt the dead
When the moon is full and white.

As sweet to a gypsy out of prison
As the smell of the gorse
Is the fragrance the red rose gives
When greeting the great god Mors.

The fragrance is the soul of the flower
Telling to you and to me
Each in its name a rare beauty
And we sense it unconsciously.

Annice Calland

HIGH NOON

Not for me the swift sweet hours of night
Given over to the vows of lovers.
Give me instead, the noonday
When the candle casts no shadow on the wall,
And no moth hovers.

Not for me the red moon of an autumn's passing,
When the leaves have turned to rust.
Give me instead, the summer's noonday
When the roads lead on to Arden,
Through the amber dust.

Helen Louise Jorze

will be forgotten, and emphasis will be placed upon the number of arrests made for theft, and the lengths of sentences passed out by our courts. No more will we advertise our vulnerability to burglary, or the ideality of our residents. While it may be that none of the guilty parties in this fiesta of crime are readers of the PINE CONE, most people hereabouts are, and we take no more silly chances.

People Talked About

Chris Jorgensen, painter of California's landscapes and an early settler in Carmel, where he built for his home what has grown to be La Playa Hotel, is visiting here, a guest of La Playa. For many years, Jorgensen had a summer home in the Yosemite valley, and no artist has rivaled him in representation of the beauties of that famous spot.

Major John H. Leavell, formerly of Carmel where he lived for some time, is making history right now at Tulsa, Oklahoma, where he has attracted much attention by a systematic rationing of the great horde of unemployed. He is feeding them a balanced ration at seven cents a day, and according to physicians and the state commissioner of charities and corrections, who investigated, the diet is healthy and sufficient. From other cities of the country have come committees to learn his system which is known as the Leavell Plan.

The applicant for rations comes to the commissary depot after investigation by one of the relief committees, with his card entitling him to the family supplies for a week. There are three types of rations: for adults, for adolescents, for small children. The applicant's requisition card gives the number of each to which his family is entitled, and they are quickly dealt out to him, with printed instructions as to their preparation and use. Also, at the depot there is a demonstration booth where a woman instructs in methods of cooking.

Major Leavell based his plan upon the rationing system in effect in his regiment during the World War. The diet was planned by himself and a committe of three Tulsa physicians, and contains high food values with a correct proportion of poteins, cabro hydrates and fats. As one scientific investigator said, "they are better balanced and provide a healthier food content than 95 per cent of the children living in the homes of the wealthy on the south side are receiving."

About 6000 are receiving rations per week in Tula. All supplies are purchased by the carload and for cash. Major Leavell says that his cost of seven cents a day will be cut to six cents shortly, without reduction of the food values, and more people can be served.

In the Call-Bulletin, Fremont Older, its editor, tells of women he has employe as reporters. Among those mentioned are several who have particular interest for Carmel people. Peggy Palmer went to the Bulletin from here; Ethel Turner was for a number of years a Carmelite; Sophie Treadwell visited here summers and was a Forest Theater star; Kathleen Norris, Bessie Beatty and Pauline Jacobson have all been here often and long enough to make many friends.

Fremont Older sums up, "Estimating one woman to ten men employed on the average daily newspaper is giving the men a shade the better of it. But out of the ninety per cent of men, there are not twenty-one men that would equal in ability and brilliancy the twenty-one one women found in the ten per cent. This indicates, I think, that a woman still must be overwhelmingly superior to a man to stand a chance for employment as a writer or reporter."

At this time of Washington's bi-centennial celebration, the fact that Monterey peninsula has a direct descendant of one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence is of interest. Gouverneur Morris of Monterey, writer of fiction and explorer of the South Seas, comes from that Gouverneur Morris who is celebrated in history for having broken his sword across his knee to signify his abnegation of the Royalist cause and his allegiance to American independence.

From the East comes the word that another concert of new American music is being prepared by Howard Hanson, director of the Eastman School of Music, and the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra. His selections for the coming program are a piano concerto by Henry Cowell, California modernist; a "Prelude and Fugue" for piano and orchesrt by Daniel Gregory Mason; William Grant Still's "Afro-American" Symphony and a concerto for oboe and orchestra by Irvine McHose.

No one thinks about photographing familiar objects. As a result, many landmarks, articles and things which once were part of every person's life have become forgotten. There would be no record of them, if it were not for the watchful eye of Louis Slevin.

He has in his photographic studio, dozens of pictures which vividly portray early life in California. Each year, they are becoming more valuable as the objects he has photographed are becoming more extinct. Some of the articles he has pictures of now have entirely disappeared.

For example what photographer in the early days would have taken the trouble to take pictures of a fire hydrant. There are hundreds of them in San Francisco. No one ever thought anything about them. Slevin did, however, and he has probably one of the only pictures of a hydrant that stood on a corner in San Francisco before 1906.

And then, who would have ever bothered to waste a plate to take a picture of a mail box? Yet the mail boxes of the early days are all extinct. We would not know what they looked like, if it were not for the photograph of one Slevin has in his possession.

The horse and carriage taxicabs, the street cars, the ferry boats and dozens of similar things which once played part in early California history are now entirely forgotten. They live in the memories of only a few person.

Slevin has snapshots of all of them. In the years to come they will be priceless for their historic value. Out of hundreds of photographers, Slevin was one of the few, if not the only one, to see the importance of filming familiar objects.

Government red tape which keeps the innocent awake at night and is the cause of more headaches than prohibition, can be easily slashed when you know how.

Take James Hopper. His stories of American sporting life pinned him up high in the literary heavens. Yet Jimmy is a Frenchman—or rather was a Frenchman not sometime ago. That is Jimmy was born in France.

He came to the states as a youngster, went to school here, became a football coach for the University of California and finally became well known as a writer, before he faced the realization that he was not an American citizen. Jimmy at once began to remedy the error by filing his application for first papers.

He waited the two year limit necessary and was then summoned to appear in the superior court at Salinas to reveal his qualifications on whether or not he would become a citizen that the country would be proud of.

One of the essential things in becoming an American citizen is having a witness who can vouch for the applicant's character, moral conduct and allegiance. Hopper found such an individual in the person of the then principal of the Salinas high school who was his former classmate at the University of California.

By a peculiar set of circumstances, J. H. Bardin who was at that time superior court judge, was also a classmate of Hopper's. Hopper spent all day in court bebore he was finally called to the stand by the naturalization examiner. The regular questions were asked and Hopper disclosed his knowledge of government affairs by getting most of them right.

Then the school principal was called to the stand. Oh yes, he answered, Hopper's character was of the best. He would make a splendid example as an American citizen. His conduct could not be beaten.

"By the way?" quizzed the federal examiner, "how long have you known Mr. Hopper."

"Ten years or more," the principal replied.

"You mean you have been constantly with him for the last five years?"

"Er—I wouldn't exactly say that. You see, this morning was the first time I have seen Mr. Hopper in many years."

"How then can you vouch for his moral conduct?" the examiner asked.

"It was always the best," the principal replied.

The federal examiner objected. The witness was disqualified.

Judge Bardin called a conference in his chambers. No, the examiner would not be persuaded to accept the witness. Hopper's case must be continued until the next naturalization hearing which was three months hence.

This time, Jimmy following his newspaper instinct, he investigated this matter of becoming a citizen. He selected as his witness a notorious Monterey politician. The politician had known Hopper right along for years. But alas, he was a poor one to judge Hopper's character.

The day came for the hearing. But Jimmy found to his despair, the politian was ill at home. He was too sick to come to court.

"You let me take care of it," the politician told Jimmy. "You go to court. I'll take care of the rest."

Jimmy went to court. This time, to his surprise, he was called on first. Things began to move. The federal examiner, the judge, the clerk and all the rest of the court, carrying all the necessary records went to the politician's home, miles away from Salinas to hear his testimony.

The court sat around the politician's beside. Several questions were asked. Such as inquiries about the patient's health. Hope was expressed he would recover shortly.

When they left the house, Jimmy asked: "Well, I suppose I have to wait another three months."

"Why no, Mr. Hopper," replied the federal examiner. "You passed your examination splendidly. Let me be the first to congratulate you."

Dr. and Mrs. J. George Taylor have closed their Pasadena home in favor of another European trip. They cancelled their tickets for a trip around the world on account of the war disturbances in the orient. Instead, they sailed Monday, September 8th. from San Pedro on the Italian liner, the "California." They go directlyto Naples, a thirty day trip. They are making a very short stay abroad this time, planning to return to their Carmel home on Camino Real in June.

Hildreth and Dick Masten, and Ricky, stayed with the Taylors for several weeks just prior to their departure but are now back at the Highlands. They had a chance to see Austin James, portrait in the round of Ricky which is now being shown at the Eighth Annual Exhibition by Pasadena Artistts, at the Pasadena Art Institute.

Monterey county, according to Prof. Joseph Grinnell, curator of the U. of C. museum of vertebrate zoology, is the most important single locality in the state where birds were first found and named. In a booklet giving the type localities or places where the 229 species and such species of birds first named by California collectors were located, the greatest number from any one section, 23, came from Monterey. "This is obviuously due," says Prof. Grinnell, "to the situation of Monterey as one of the chief ports of call along the Californian coast in the early 1800's, as also to the circumstance that a most energetic ship's naturalist, Alexander Collie of the Blossom, found greatest opportunity at an early date to collect specimens there. Furthermore, his collections fell into the hands of a systematist, Vigors, who fully made known the novelties."

Another reason is that we have, both in fauna and flora, a greater diversity than any other part of the state. Monterey county seems to be farthest north for the equatorial plant, fish, bird and beast, and farthest south for the polar types of life. We have, too, sea coast and forested mountains, a variegated abiding place for all kinds of bird and animal life. Monterey county, from the first has been a paradise for the animal kingdom.

A Chinese house boy who once washed dishes for a Carmel family was today in the midst of heavy fighting in China as head of the Canton air forces.

Word of his promotion to be brigadier-general was received this week by Mrs. Dudley Kinsell, for whom he worked. The boy, now known as General Senn Chung came to America when he was eleven years of age.

His father, a prominent Canton banker had entrusted him in the care of J. W. McClymonds, the father of Mrs. Kinsell and superintendent of the Oakland schools for more than 25 years. McClymonds had aided other Chinese youngsters in their education and Senn Chung came to live and work in their household.

When he arrived in Oakland, Mrs. Kinsell recalls, he did not speak a word of English. He went through grammar school there and finally graduated from an engineering school. When he was in his twenties he entered Virginia Military academy, graduating with high honors and was presented with his diploma by General Pershing.

Senn Chung became interested in aviation, and when he graduated from the military academy was a full-fledged aviator. He visited with the McClymonds for a short time before he returned to his native country.

Here, honors in the army came quickly. He has kept in constant communication with Mrs. Kinsell and her husband, former superior court judge of Alameda county, telling them of his various promotions. Four years ago, he returned to the states again, this time with an entourage of secretaries and officers.

He was empowered by the Chinese government to buy a fleet of American built airplanes, many of which are now being used in the present warfare. On his return to the Orient, he stopped again in Oakland and spent several days at the home of Judge and Mrs. Kinsell.

Recent interviews and photographs published in the Chinese newspapers and sent by him to Mrs. Kinsell, show that he has always credited her father as being responsible for his education and his subsequent promotions in the Chinese army.

Judge and Mrs. Kinsell have been coming to Carmel for many years and now live on Dolores street.

Carmel Widow Suffers Loss of Big Income

The luxuries of life, priceless paintings and servants which surrounded Mrs. Wilma Sutro, Carmel Highland's resident are no more.

Her income as the widow of Charles Sutro, San Francisco financier, has been reduced from $1500 a month to $200 as the result of a hearing last week before Superior Judge H. G. Jorgensen in Salinas.

Reduction of the income was found imperative, it was disclosed in court, because of the depreciation of the value of the Sutro estate since the stock market crash. It is believed that Sutro who died last April, did not foresee the curtailment of his funds for his 28-year-old wife.

The reduction of the income which was asked by Wells Fargo and Union Trust Company, executors of the estate, comes as a second reverse to Mrs. Sutro. Only a few months ago, her Carmel highlands home was razed by fire, burning many art treasures, including a painting by Carot. Only a small amount of insurance covered the loss.

Memorial Oak Planted

An oak tree has been planted by Mrs. Samuel Barling in Devendorf Park in the name of the Daughters of Cincinnati, to commemorate the bi-centennial of George Washington.

The Society of Cincinnati was established, by officers of the Revolutionary Army of the United States in 1783, to prepetuate their friendship and to raise a fund to aid the orphans and widows of those fallen during the war. George Washington was the first president of the Society. In 1894 a society called the Daughters of Cincinnati was formed in New York by women, descendants of these officers. There are a few members of this Society in California and Carmel was chosen by them as the place for the planting of the tree.

Christian Science Churches

"Mind" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon Sunday, February 21, in all Churches of Christ Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon will include the following from the Bible: "If there be therefore any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any bowels and mercies, Fulfill ye my joy, that ye be likeminded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind. Let nothing be done through strife or vainglory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves. Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus" (Phil. 2:1-3, 5).

The Lesson-Sermon also will include the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "It should be thoroughly understood that all men have one Mind, one God and Father, one Life, Truth, and Love. Mankind will become perfect in proportion as this fact becomes apparent, war will cease and the true brotherhood of man will be established. Having no other gods, turning to no other but the one perfect Mind to guide him, man is the likeness of God, pure and eternal, having that Mind which was also in Christ" (p. 467).

Haasis Appointed as School Trustee

Dr. Ferdinand Haasis, connected with the local Carnegie laboratory, has been appointed on the Sunset school board of trustes, it was learned this week.

As the result of the appointment made by James Force, county superintendent of schools on the recommendation of the local board, Dr. Haasis will not come up for election this coming March.

Dr. Haasis will occupy the seat vacated by Frederick Bigland, president of the school board, who has resigned. Members of the school board at first believed that Bigland's term expired this year and Dr. Haasis was put up as the logical candidate.

Shortly after Dr. Haasis candidacy was announced, members of the school board learned that Bigland's term did not expire until March of next year. Dr. Haasis candidacy had then to be withdrawn and his appointment followed.

The only candidate to run for the school board in the March election is Mrs. Hester Schoeninger. Miss Clara Kellogg, the third member of the board, was elected last year.

Special Deputy Will Guard for Burglaries

Carmel's mysterious burglar who has entered more than a dozen homes outside the city limits was today still roaming around.

The only definite clue now in the possession of county authorities who are making an investigation was a woman's footprint found in the back of the Howell Byrnes' home in Hatton Fields which was burglarized last week, and at the Cluen robbery. Officers are still working on the theory that a woman might be responisble for the jobs.

In order to assure residents living outside the city limits greater protection, a special deputy has been stationed in this section by Sheriff Carl H. Abbott. The deputy will patrol all the outskirts of Carmel in the hope of apprehending the burglar.

No new burglaries so far this week have been reported to either authorities.

Clothes Burned up as Fire Starts in Closet

Members of the Carmel fire department, minus their red berets, responded to a call Monday night at the cottage on Camino Real between Seventh and Eight owned by Mrs. George Blackman.

A defective vent just installed caused a blaze in one of the closets. The clothes in the closet belonging to Miss Barry and Miss Sampson, the occupants of the house, were in flames before the fire was noticed.

Quick work on the part of the fire department under Fire Chief Robert Leidig succeeded in extinguishing the blaze before any other part of the house was damaged. The clothes lost in the fire were valued at around $200.

Carmelites! It Rests With You!

In the face of an un-employment problem and the depression—two new groceries and markets one of them a chain, plan to open in Carmel–which is already so over-crowded with groceries and markets, local merchants have their hands full to keep their help employed and break even.

The new stores CANNOT UNDERSELL US. Through associations, state and national, LOCAL INDEPENDENT BUTCHERS AND GROCERS BUY AND SELL AS LOW AS THE CHAIN. Do not be misled by specials advertised below cost as bait. Either the goods are inferior or non-competitive items are marked up to raise the average– obviously no one can sell below cost and remain in business.

THE NEWCOMERS CAN OFFER YOU NO ADVANTAGE. They can only spend money hoping to eliminate some of us. Should they succeed Carmel home owners, tax payers, parents of school children and your neighbors will lose their jobs, adding to an already acute local unemployment problem.

WHY PAY TRIBUTE TO ABSENTEE OWNERS who take money out of Carmel to support schools and civic institutions in other cities, WHEN CARMEL GROCERS AND BUTCHERS OFFER YOU AS MUCH OR MORE FOR YOUR MONEY!
